

This modular rug for exterior and interior environments is created by sewing lengthwise with Punto Zigzag stripes in Kimia fabric with a width of 15 cm and different lengths.

Groups of two or five flat braids in Rope yarn are appliqued, with the same stitch, on the seams joining the stripes, ensuring that one of them always creates a sinuous pattern over the others.

The different lengths of the stripes, whose number varies according to the rug's dimension, create on the shorter sides an irregular border, resulting from the combination of elements more recessed to other slightly more protruding.

One colour can be chosen for the backing, while up to two colours can be chosen for the décor: one for the straight braids, one for the sinuous ones.

Materials and production techniques advise against the use of Wadi in high traffic areas.
